

Research Project for PhD Student

Project Title:

Placement supervisors' experiences of teaching final year veterinary students

Project Supervisor:

Associate Professor Rosanne Taylor

+61 2 9351 2703

Susan Matthew

+61 2 9351 8760

susan_matthew@usyd.edu.au

One Sentence Project Summary: (single sentence for Google-style search results)

This project uses student learning research to investigate placement supervisors' experiences of teaching final year veterinary students.

Project Synopsis: (about 250 words max)

This project seeks to establish the variation that exists in placement supervisors' experiences of teaching final year veterinary students. It is designed to complement existing research into the quality of students' experiences of learning during final year placements. Surveys and interviews will be used to investigate the quality of supervisors' teaching experiences. The data will be analysed using the principles of student learning research and links to the quality of students' learning outcomes will be explored. The results are intended to guide improvement of supervisor training courses in a range of healthcare professions.

Other Information: (e.g. scholarships/funding available, etc.)

Funding available to support research expenses.
